ALEAA, GAZETTE & VIRGINIA ADVERTISER (FOR THE COUNTRY,) Published regularly on TUESDAYS, THURS-DAYS and SATURDAYS, at FIVE DOLLARS

PER ANNUM, payable in advance. MADGE MILLER. [From the Portland Transcript.] Madge Miller, on a summer day. Walked, as usual, her pleasant way. Her dress was tidy, her apron white; Her face was sweet as the morning light. She was a country village maid, Learning a country milliner's trade. Her bands were soft, her dress was clean, And little she knew what care might mean. "Lovers may come and lovers may go, But a saitor came with a tall silk hat; He told her a story worth too of that. Since first the earth out of chaos rolled. Let us kindly hope who are old and wise, He did not know he was telling lies.) "Marry me, darling, and you shall be The happiest woman on land or sea! "No longer then will you have to go To your daily labor through heat or snow. "It shall be my pleasure, my law, my life, To make you a blest and happy wife. "Marry me, and you never shall know A sorrow or hardship, a care or woe !' She heard the story of promised bliss-

Bright and big was the honey moon, And clouded by worldly care too soon. For housework led her its weary round. Fettering closer her burdened hands. In her husband's house she came to be

Were seasons of wakeful, nervous dread -So it at last o'er her aching head The angel of slumber chanced to stoop, He brought her visions of mumps or croup; And she rose unrested, and went once more Through the dull routine of the day before. Week by week did she drudge, and toil, And stew and pickle, and roast and boil, And scrub, and iron, and sweep and cook, Her only reading a recipt book. And bathe the children and brush their locks, Button their aprons and pin their frocks, And patch old garments and darn and mend ) weary worry that has no end!

The pretty charm of her girlish days-For how can a playful fancy rove When once tied up to a cooking stove? Her face was old ere she reached her prime, Fated and care-worn before its time. Sometimes would her well-kept husband look p from the page of his paper or book, And note how the bloom had left her face, llow gray had mixed with her locks of brown

Did she follow the round of 'woman's sphere' Not vexing her husband's days or nights By any mention of woman's rights,

Her life's one selfish deed-she died, roud and happy and quite content With the slavish way her days were spent! feeling, of course, that her life was lost Nobly in saving a servant's cost! Ah! of all the sad thoughts of women or men

The saddest is this, "It needn't have been!" THE TURKISH MINISTER. - Aristarchi Bey,

"He has come to a good place," said a sprightanst everything rational for foreign titledom. figurate as his own, helped himself bountifulto "favors," out of turn and in, and distributed them promiseuously among the young adies, known or unknown, who happened to attract his beyship's admiration. One young lady asked him, "Could he dance?" "Yes," he replied, "as we do in Turkey," and forth-with asked the damsel to favor him with a waltz. It is not safe to dwell too much on the "sait of the "spin" when the young aforesaid within hearing distance. Suffice it to say diagnishes her entrance into the ball room, with the freshness and choicness of toilet which taken unto itself wings at the termination tearing race, and one was reminded of appearance of the poll-parrot in the ancetobbed of its gay plumage by the mis-Turkish Minister. Was that a sufficompensation for torn and bedraggled stan and hair needing Pleasantriderhood's sets to put it up ? - Cor. Cincinnati Gazette. AUCTIONERRS.
